WEDNESDAY, January 11, 1749.

A FABLE.

The LAWYER, and JUSTICE.

JOVE! then divineſt good below,
Thy pure delights few mortals know!
Our rebel heart thy ſway diſown,
While tyrant luſt uſurps thy throne!

The bounteous God of nature made
The ſexes for each other's aid,
Their mutual talents to employ,
To leſſen ills, and heighten joy:
To weaker woman he aſſign'd
That ſoft'ning gentleneſs of mind,
That can, by ſympathy, impart
It's likeneſs to the roughеſt heart.
Her eyes with magic pow'r endu'd,
To fire the dull, and awe the rude.
His roſy fingers on her face
Shed lavish ev'ry blooming grace,
And ſtamp'd (perfection to diſplay)
His mildeſt image on her clay.

Man, active, reſolute, and bold,
He faſhion'd in a diff'rent mould.
With uſeful arts his mind inform'd,
His breaſt with nobler paſſions warm'd,
He gave him knowledge, ſtrength, and ſenſe,
And courage, for the fair's defence.
Her frame, reſiſtleſs to each wrong,
Demands protection from the ſtrong;
To man ſhe flies, when fear alarms,
And claims the temple of his arms.
By nature's author thus declar'd
The woman's ſov'reign, and her guard,
Shall man, by treach'rous wiles invade
The weakneſs, he was meant to aid?
While beauty given to inſpire
Protecting love, and ſoft deſire,
Lights up a wild fire in the breaſt,
And to it's own breaſt points the duſt,
To triumph over innocence?
The wolf, that tears the tim'rous ſheep,
Was never ſet the fold to keep!
Nor was the tyger, or the pard
Meant the benighted trav'ler's guard;
But man, the wildeſt beaſt of prey,
Wears friendſhip's ſemblance, to betray;
His ſtrength againſt the weak employs,
And where he ſhould protect, deſtroys.

Paſt twelve o'clock, the watchman cry'd,
His brief the hideous Lawyer ply'd
The all prevailing fee they gave,
The ſarcaſt of to morrow's eve.
They were from Bung's
Sudden
The jarring cattineſs matter's money
The doors admit a hollow ſound,
And ruſhing from their hinges bound;

Can'ſt thou be doubtful who I am?
Is Juſtice grown ſo ſtrange a name?
Were not your courts for juſtice rais'd?
'Twas there, of old, my altars blaz'd:
My guardian title dw'elt
My ſacred temple to protect,
That thou, and all thy venal tribe
Shou'd ſpurn the goddeſs for the bribe!
Aloud the ruin'd clients cries,
Juſtice has neither ears, nor eyes!
In foul alliance with the bar,
'Gainſt me the judge denounces war,
And rarely iſſues his decree,
But with intent to baffle me.
She paus'd. Her breaſt with fury barn'd,
The trembling Lawyer thus return'd:
I own the charge is juſtly laid,
And weak th' excuſe that can be made;
Yet ſearch the ſpacious globe, and ſee
If all mankind are not like me.

The gown-man, ſkill'd in vomith lies,
By faith's falſe glaſs deludes our eyes,
O'er conſcience rides without controul,
And robs the mind to ſave the ſoul.
The doctor, with important face,
By ſly deſign, miſtakes the caſe,
Preſcribes, and ſpins out the diſeaſe,
To trick the patient of his fees.
The ſoldier, rough with many a ſcar,
And red with ſlaughter, leads the war;
If he'd a nation's truſt betray,
The foe has offer'd double pay.
When vice o'er all mankind prevails,
And weighty int'reſt turns the ſcales,
Muſt I be better than the reſt,
And harbour juſtice in my breaſt?
Or one ſide only take the fee,
Content with poverty and thee?
Thou blind to merit, and vile of mind,
Th' unſparing bane of human kind,
If virtue from the world is flown,
Will other's friends truſt thy own?
For fickly ſouls the prieſt was made;
Phyſicians, for the body's aid;
The ſoldier guarded liberty;
Man, woman, and the lawyer me.
If all are faithleſs to their truſt,
They leave not thee the leaſt unjuſt.
Henceforth your pleadings diſdain,
Aſk but the ſanction of my name;
Within your courts it ſhall be read,
That Juſtice from the law is fled.
She ſpoke, and hid in ſhades her face,
'Till Heav'n cloath'd her into grace.

HANOVER, September 6.

IF, contrary to all hopes, the ſigning the definitive treaty at Aix la Chapelle ſhould be delayed yet ſome time longer, his majeſty will celebrate his birth-day here, having, it is ſaid, determined not to return to London 'till after every thing is ſettled. It is alſo ſaid that the prince of Heſſe, ſon to the landgrave of Heſſe Caſſel, and conſort to the princeſs Amelia of Pruſſia, ſiſter to the preſent king of Pruſſia, will be married before the departure of his Pruſſian majeſty for Berlin.

Warſaw, Sept. 7. We have received the unhappy news, that a great fire has lately happened at Wengrow, whereby that place has been entirely reduced to aſhes. [illegible] that a great part of thoſe houſes being conſtructed [illegible] that town, they ſet all the bells a ringing, and made a great [illegible] which ordinarily there does not run above water than would drown

Paris, Sept. 6. It is reported that marshal Saxe has demanded 15000 men of the king, for an important expedition; which, it is said, will not interest the powers that were heretofore at war.

Vienna, Sept. 7. It is assured that the king of Great Britain has caused representations to be made to this court, tending to engage it to desist from some pretensions, which 'tis said hinder the signing of the definitive treaty. It is not known what answer the empress queen has given thereto; but every body is persuaded, that her Imperial majesty is well disposed to contribute all she can to accelerate the general pacification.

Chamberry, Sept. 15. The Infant Don Philip is making preparations for his departure. Two days after that prince left the castle of Rochetta, it was reduced to ashes by lightning. 'Tis reported that the marriage of the king of Sardinia with the dutchess dowager of Guastalla, will soon be accomplished without any ceremony; and that of the duke of Savoy with madam Victoire of France, will be deferred 'til after the peace.

Paris, Sept. 30. According to letters from Genoa, dated the 17th, it appears, that the Piedmontese and Austrians begin to draw off from the frontiers of that state: But the latter, as they retire, redouble their vexations at Parma, Placentia, and Guastalla, for the payment of the exorbitant contributions they have demanded there; which is look'd upon as a sign, that they are soon entirely to quit the country.

According to some late letters from Leghorn, the Genoese mountaineers lately fell upon a party of the French, their professed friends, and had entirely destroyed them all, if a body of Imperial Croats had not flew to the succour of the latter, and fell upon the Highlanders, putting many to the sword, and taking abundance of prisoners.

The last letters from Constantinople inform us, that three foreign powers began in the month of April last, to intrigue in the seraglio and the divan, in order to force the grand segnior to take part with them against the House of Austria and Russia; but having found his highness immoveable in the principles he had hitherto acted upon, they spirited up the different insurrections which appeared in the months of June and July, the object of which was to dethrone the grand segnior, and place upon the throne one of the sons of his brother.

The Spaniards have already embarked 140 of their invalids for Barcelona whither it is pretended the rest of their troops will follow successively: except the corps destined to accompany the Infant Don Philip into Lombardy.

Warsaw, Sept. 18. Letters from Podolia say, that they have received advice from Constantinople of a great revolution in that capital, on occasion of which the Grand Segnior had been dethroned, and his nephew set up in his room. They add, that the Tartars disliking the Cham which the Porte had appointed them, openly refused to acknowlege him, and had elected another among themselves.

Paris, Sept. 27. The young pretender has hired the hotel of St. Paul, on the Theatins key, and will remove into it the first of October; from whence we conjecture, that the British court does not insist upon his being sent out of this kingdom, or else that his majesty has refused to gratify them in this point. It is currently reported, that the king has bought up several English men of war, and is desirous to take into his service all the English seamen that are discharged.

Madrid, Sept. 27. The departure of madam of France, consort to the infant Don Philip, is fixed for the beginning of October.

We have the disagreeable news from Barcelona, that several transports which were bringing over from the island of Majorca, part of the regiment of Ireland have had the misfortune to be taken by three large Barbary pyrates. There were on board these transports twenty officers and one hundred soldiers, with their wives and children. The passage between Majorca and Barcelona being so short, the government neglected to order a man of war or frigate to convoy these transports.

Cracow, August 30. Public prayers have been put up in all the public churches of this diocese, to beg of heaven a deliverance from the dreadful plague of locusts: and many of our people, both rich and poor, are already vowing that they will go in pilgrimage to our lady of Loretto, and St. James of Compostella, if nothing else will rid us of those insects; nay, we are making interest with the whole host of Heaven, both antient and modern saints, being resolved not to lose our suit for want of mediators and intercessors. We hear from Zamosc, that a great swarm of those insects having approached that town, they set all the bells a ringing, and made a great noise in all the adjacent fields with frying pans, salt-boxes, butter-tubs, and firing pistols, &c. by which means they soon frightened them away: But soon after a larger swarm appearing, the same method was tried in vain; the locusts divided into two bands, one of which continued their flight towards Wincuzic; but the other despising the noise, would not stir, 'til they had laid some fields quite bare; and the next morning they followed the first division. This second swarm has been followed by a third much more numerous, having taken up above three hours in flying by the town.

LONDON.

Sept. 7. The Sallee rovers, and indeed most of the gallies belonging to the pyratical states in Barbary, have taken advantage of the decline of the French marine, to make prizes upon their coasts of Spanish and Italian vessels, two of which they were lately so hardy as to cut out of the road of St. Tropez; upon which two frigates are fitting out at Marseilles, which are to cruize upon those coasts, in order to oblige the corsairs to keep their distance, in pursuance of treaties, by which they stipulate not to come within ten leagues of the shore. It is whisper'd at Marseilles, that as soon as the peace is concluded, satisfaction will be demanded for those insults.

The conduct of the prince stadtholder at Amsterdam has been so equal and judicious, that neither party have had the least cause to complain, his highness having entered that city without guards, to shew his confidence in the good affections of the burghers; and having obliged them, during the time their dispute with the magistrates was in hearing, to pay them all the respects due to their quality and offices, which gave them the highest satisfaction: Nor were there any changes made in the regency, 'til each of the members had made a free resignation, and declared himself willing to submit to any regulation that his serene highness in his great wisdom should be pleased to make, pursuant to the full powers granted him for that purpose, by their noble mightinesses the states of Holland and West Friesland.

Sept. 8. It is generally expected, that in the ensuing session of parliament, a very strict enquiry will be made into the conduct of the governors of some of our colonies, in order to discover the true source of that spirit of dissatisfaction and distraction, with which they have been disturbed of late years, to the no small detriment of the affairs of their mother country, as well as their own. Such an enquiry will probably correct all past mistakes, or at least produce a law, prescribing such rules as may prevent them for the future; and thereby hinder English planters from removing to Surinam, or any of the French islands.

Several grave politicians think, that our ministers are too forward in lessening our strength both by sea and land; but as to the return of the Russians, it is as much owing to the representations of the king of Prussia, as to those of his most Christian majesty; the former having declared, that if the French attempt to draw any advantage from this step, he will immediately join the Allies with double the number of his own troops. And this is the true reason why the Prussians are every where in motion.

We learn from Stockholm, that the health of his Swedish majesty continuing still in a state of great uncertainty and fluctuation, the commission has been renewed, which enables three senators, who are in constant attendance, to sign all papers of state in his majesty's name, which are likewise countersigned by the secretary.

Letters from Paris, of the 13th instant, N. S. assure us, that the marriage of the prince of Piedmont with the French king's third daughter, will be shortly declared at court; and that whatever becomes of the definitive general treaty, they depend upon a peace with the court of Turin.

They write from Bruges, that troops daily pass through that city, all taking the route of Dunkirk, Calais, &c.

An Extract of a Letter from Stockport, in Cheshire, dated August 27.

"On the 23d of July we had here a most prodigious storm of thunder and lightning, with the most violent rain ever seen, occasioned by a cloud bursting, which in two hours time raised our river fifteen or twenty yards perpendicular, which has done incredible damage, at least 10,000*l.* by which several families are ruin'd: It has destroyed almost all the bank of the river, from Waley bridge for several miles downwards; it not only ruined the corn and grass, but the land for ever. Several people lost their lives; several houses, cottages, corn-mills, and other buildings, were taken down: Abundance of fine timber was carried down the river, hay, and a great many sheep. Two women who were fifteen were drowned in a little rivulet, in which ordinarily there does not run more water than would drown drown a kitten. At Hesfield, a parish church about four miles above us, it washed the church-yard bare to the rock, and took several people out of their graves; so there were found next day hung in bushes and trees a corpse in one place, a coffin in another, a shroud in another. It has took down several stone, county, and other bridges, with all the walls and fences, for miles, and made a dismal destruction. We have had very bad harvest weather hitherto, by which a deal of corn is damaged, but now we have good weather."

BOSTON, November 28.

We hear from Annapolis-Royal, that on the 28th past, capt. Gorham, with 10 men and paddles, went to the east of the harbour in St. John's river, and capt. Prebble and capt. Davis, commander of the Warren, with 5 oars-men, went to the westward of the harbour, to make discoveries; and going ashore, were fired upon by the Indians, and one of capt. Prebble's men shot thro' the body, who died three days after; two of capt. Gorham's men were also kill'd, and three wounded. Capt. Prebble also narrowly escaped with his life; for seeing one of the Indians presenting his gun at him, at about 80 yards distance, he step'd behind a small tree, in the center of which the ball lodged directly against his body: He immediately return'd the fire with a brace of balls, as did capt. Davis, which he hopes did execution: After which they retreated safely to the boat, and returned to the vessels. They took two of the enemy, and brought them with them; one of whom is said to be son to one of the chiefs, who afterwards made his escape.
